HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., April 16, 1888. j

General Orders, No. 7. May 39, 1888, will mark the 20th annual recurrence of Momorial Day; a day set apart by the peo-ple of a renewed and perpetuated Union in remem-brance of those who, in life, offered all in defense of the National integrity and honor. Although originally instituted by the Grand Army of the Republic, as a means of strengthening and preserving the fraternal ties incident to our union of purpose and effort in a noble cause, the beautiful ceremomal barn of our comradeship has been so widely adopted by the loyal hearts of the land that Memorial Day has become a great National festival in which lender memories and patriotic purposes rule

The spirit and customs of our Order impose upon his comrades the duty of participating in the pub-lic recognition of the day. So far as practicable the usual vocations will be suspended and the occas on marked by some appropriate observance. Though legally a holiday in many Departments it is to be jealously guarded from all appearance of menry-making, and from all forms of frivolous or undignified behavior. Let it not be forgotten that our comrades dead were earnest, manly men, who voluntarily faced death for a cause worthy of the

Wherever practicable, Posts are directed to attend divine worship in bodies, on the Sabbath preceding Memorial Day. The clergy are invited to architete such attendance and to so order the services of the day as to promote general public interest in the coming anniversary. Let all known graves of the men who fought for the Union, on nd or sea, be marked by the pure blossoms of Spring, in which all tongues speak the language of gratitude and love. Let the people be assembled for special memorial services where cloquence and song shall undie to teach and exemplify the duties and rewards of patriotism; and so may "the better angels of our nature "touching" the tender chords of memory, which stretch from every battlefield O. D., J. W. Shuek; O. The following recommendation by the Committee on Good of the Order was adopted and ordered put in operation: We believe that owing to the size of this Department, and the number of Posts comprising it, that it is impossible for the Commander to personally visit every Post in his jurisdiction. At the same time it seems absolutely necessary for the welfare of the Posts that some steps be taken to encourage their frequently flagging spirits and to enthuse anew the sentiments of their strictic hearts to brace up (if we may be allowed the expression) the weak Posts and assure their continued life and usefulness, and to this end we would recommend that this Department be formed Into Divisions, each Division to consist of at least 10 Posts and to be under the immediate supervision of a staff officer of the Commander, who shall be empowered to appoint and commission the necesway number for that purpose. The duty of the They shall receive their instructions from him; minall visit the Posts in their Divisions at least once a year, and require every Post to conform to the Rules and Regulations of the Order, and that they Divisions. Gleanings from National Headquarters---Notes from the Departments.

The Woman's Relief Corps was so fortunate as to be represented by two of its most honored members at the Woman's International Congress at Washington, E. Florence Barker and Clara Barton. Mrs. Barker spoke but a few moments, but in her most eloquent vein, before an immense audience, and when she sat down the cries were "go on, go on." Her address the representative of the only official auxiliary of the Grand Army of the Republic. LIKE SIRE LIKE DAUGHTER.

It is natural that we should desire to know something of the antecedents of those with whom we are associated, particularly when they occupy positions of responsibility and trust. And we are sure that the fact that the National Secretary, Armilla A. Cheney, is a lineal descendant of John Perkins, who, 250 years ago, saved the little Puritan Colony of Ipswich, Mass., from the Indians, will be of in-terest. Mrs. Cheney is a brown-eyed, pleasant-faced woman, with a world of patience and charity. but as firm in her sense of right and as quiet and careful in her management of affairs as her illustrious grandsire of colonial fame. She is a native of Portage County, O.; her maiden name was Perkins. She was married May 27, 1868, to Capt. J.W. Cheney, Co. C. 7th Ohio; enlisted April 25, 1861; a native of Barre, Mass. Mrs. Cheney's parents were both of Massachusetts origin. John Perkins, her pre-Revolutionary grandsire, and subject of the poem which follows, written by Rev. Thomas Cobbett, of Ipswich, Mass., was born in England in 1614; came to America with others in 1631; removed to Ipswich in 1633, where the event described occurred :

DELIVERANCE OF AGAWAM (1633). Tell me the story, for I like to know Of things that happened so long ago. Or fact, or legend, whichever it be, Of deepest interest 'twill be to me. These olden towns in provincial days Have much in their history for us to praise. We stood together, my friend and I, Neath the clear blue arch of a Summer sky. Before us, the sound, the bar, the bay Bathed in beautiful sunlight lay. Behind us the hill sloped gently down To the very streets of Ipswich town. And seeking the shade of an apple tree, This is the tale he told to me: Here in this valley my fathers dwelt When the red man's power was feared and felt, Here 'neath the church the mansion stands, And away to the left are the fertile lands. And down the river, that island green, With its fields of grass and maize between, Where you see the barn, with its moss-grown side, Just in range with the channel's tide,

There's where it happened, you first must know, Just a fourth of a thousand years ago. Away o'er the hills in the glowing west, An Indian runner, worn and poor, Sought good man Perkins' open door, And told him a tale that made him fear For the lives of those he loved so dear. There are forty canoes, he said, at least, On their way from the distant east, Filled with the warlike Torrentines, Whose names are blent with cruel scenes. They'll come with weapons in their hands To desolate your fertile lands;

With purpose strong to drive you from Your quiet homes in Agawam. In the morn, he said, of the second day Down in the creek they'll hide away, And the Chiefs will come to your roof-tree's shade With cunning words of peace and trade, With smiling mien, but with hearts as chill As wintry winds that sweep this hill. I bid my pale-faced brothers heed The warning that I've brought with speed, The warrior was offered wine and meat, And a place to rest his weary feet,

But he turned away with haughty mien Out into the forest dark and green. Out of the skies the stars looked down But dimly o'er the sleeping town, The gathered mists were thick and chill Where flows the river swift and still. Unheeding the toil of the previous day, With never a fear of the devious way, Over the meadows and marshy lands, Over the creeks and over the sands, Straight on the course young Perkins kept, To the halls where Governor Winthrop slept, And waking that sturdy pioneer, Told him the tale of dread and fear. Awhile the Governor spoke no word,

As if the story had been unheard; Then, kneeling down beside his bed, Meekly and lowly bowed his head, And up to heaven a prayer be sent To God to spare the settlement, For well he knew no human arm Could shield it from impending harm. An hour passed on, and yet the air Was laden with that carnest prayer, Such prayer as human lips express

Discharge your musket toward the skies.

And night shut dimly, darkly down

Next morn the sun came bursting through

With sweetest songs that birds e'er sang.

And nature wore her brightest smlles

The fathers stood with bated breath,

Within their homes with listening ear

With nerves of steel young Perkins stood

On the island near his cottage rude,

The lights of courage pure and high

Burned in the flashes of his eye,

The mothers clasped their babes with fear.
